

The Successful Guitarist

important information for pupils

If you really want to play the guitar, you have to make space for it in your life.

It's not enough just to come to the lessons.

You have to play your guitar at home on a regular basis.

What will you give up to make space for guitar-playing?

What should I play?

You should go over what we covered in your lesson - LOTS of TIMES!

Pay attention to what you are doing. Listen. Think. Are you doing it right?

Are you sitting properly – with a footstool, like in the lessons?

Are you using the correct fingers of both hands?

Does it sound any good? If not, why not? It's up to you to make it better!

Where should I play?

Somewhere quiet. Not the living room – especially if the telly is on.

When should I play?

EVERY DAY!

How long should I play for?

The more you play, the faster you will learn. It's up to you, but it's not worth your parents paying for lessons unless you spend at least ten minutes a day playing your guitar.

Playing the guitar can be great fun, but the fun comes as a result of putting in time and effort.

It's up to you.....
